

COMPUTER SYSTEM WITH A LIQUID-COOLING THERMAL MODULE HAVING A PLURALITY OF PUMPS

Abstract

A computer system includes a processor for processing data, a storage unit for storing data, and a liquid-cooling thermal module for dissipating heat generated by the processor. The thermal module has a heat pipe adjacent to the processor for conducting heat, and a cooling device. The cooling device has a plurality of tanks, which are connected with each other.